

Drug Store.

To all Fellow-Sufferers!

Who are now convalescing from disease, let one who has been there, give you his experience, and follow it if you would be speedily restored; eat plenty of apples, and drink good cider freely. As a diet, rare beef steak and broil chicken with very light bread; eggs and rich milk in abundance. Then follow right afterwards with a dose of Tucker's "L.L." to digest and assimilate your food, and this, at last, is the secret of health, a good digestion, which means the manufacture of blood, and that is the life of man, whereby wasted tissue, depleted by disease, is built up and the vigor and the rosy hue of our former selves once more asserted. Try it. Our word for it. You will never live long enough to cease thanking your friend. W. L. TUCKER.

"He vows he does not want the earth;

His thoughts are far above it;

His smile little don't cover;

A very little meets his wants."

He says, "a man should ask,

And thanks the Lord for giving;

The truth you'll have to borrow;

The man who fights for bread to day

Will have to go to bed to night."

intendent of the telegraph company,

is Mr. Crabbie, who has long been employed as inspector.

"Toughy," said a mother to her seven-year-old boy, "you must not interrupt me when I am talking with ladies. You must wait till we stop,

and then you can talk." "But you never stop," retorted the boy.

A mistress, who had just hired a new cook, made a tour of inspection

after she had kept her a week, and found a policeman locked up in the pantry. "How did this man get here?" asked the maid severely. "I'm not know," answered the boy.

"He must have been left over by the old cook."

A strange coincidence transpired at the postoffice yesterday. Mr. Connor,

"The Mikado." There was an immense audience at the Academy of Music last evening, when Ford's Opera Company, which has just started out on a southern tour, commenced its engagement of two nights in Gilbert & Sullivan's latest comic opera, "The Mikado." The opera itself, much of whose predecessors by the same authors, is a conglomeration of absurdities, but the music is of the taking order, and nearly every song, especially when Miss Alice May (Ketch) and Miss Mabel Hass (Yum Yum), George Dunham (Ko-Ko), and Joseph Almond (Pooh-Bah) appeared, was repeated.
